Using literature from the central library as the reference, I chiseled some teeth out of boar tusks, covered the parts that connect to her mouth with water-dragonfish skin, and used slime to hold the dentures in place. It was hard to get the size right, but it was probably even harder for Reszurre to endure days of me readjusting her new teeth. Nevertheless, the dentures were eventually complete.

doze... doze...

Her heartbeat is awfully weak... Ahh-drip

Recovery will take a while. I need to care for her skin, give her eye drops, make her food that's easy on the stomach, give her plenty of sleep, and massage and reposition her to help with blood circulation. In the meantime, I had been working on her dentures.

So hot with all the candles...

...You did well. This should be good enough for now...
